Aquarela (Watercolor):

Numa folha qualquer eu desenho um sol amarelo
E com cinco ou seis retas é fácil fazer um castelo.
Corro o lápis em torno da mão e me dou uma luva,
E se faço chover,
com dois riscos tenho um guarda-chuva.

Se um pingüinho de tinta cai num pedacinho azul do papel,
Num instante imagino uma linda gaivota a voar no céu.
Vai voando, contornando a imensa curva Norte e Sul,
Vou com ela, viajando, Hawaii, Beijing ou Istanbul.
Pinto um barco a vela branco, navegando, é tanto céu e mar num beijo azul.

Entre as nuvens vem surgindo um lindo avião rosa e grená.
Tudo em volta colorindo, com suas luzes a piscar.
Basta imaginar e ele está partindo, sereno, indo,
E se a gente quiser ele vai pousar.

Numa folha qualquer eu desenho um navio de partida
Com alguns bons amigos bebendo de bem com a vida.
De uma América a outra consigo passar num segundo,
Giro um simples compasso e num círculo eu faço o mundo.

Um menino caminha e caminhando chega no muro
E ali logo em frente, a esperar pela gente, o futuro está.
E o futuro é uma astronave que tentamos pilotar,
Não tem tempo nem piedade, nem tem hora de chegar.
Sem pedir licença muda nossa vida, depois convida a rir ou chorar.

Nessa estrada não nos cabe conhecer ou ver o que virá.
O fim dela ninguém sabe bem ao certo onde vai dar.
Vamos todos numa linda passarela
De uma aquarela que um dia, enfim, descolorirá.

Numa folha qualquer eu desenho um sol amarelo
(que descolorirá).
E com cinco ou seis retas é fácil fazer um castelo
(que descolorirá).
Giro um simples compasso e num círculo eu faço o mundo
(que descolorirá).

Aquarela (Watercolor):

On a sheet of paper draw a yellow-coloured sun
And with five or six straight lines I easily draw a castle.
I run the pencil to contour my fingers and I get myself a glove on the paper. And if I draw the rain,
By just stroking two dashes, I easily get an umbrella.

If a little drop of paint drips on a blue portion of my draw
For an instant, I imagine it to be a beautiful gull, flying in the sky.
And she flies on and on contouring a huge line over the horizon,
From the north to the south. And I'm flying along with her Over Hawaii, Beijing or Istanbul. I paint a sailboat, which is smoothly sailing away. There's so much of the sky and sea's immensity into the blue-green colour.

Through the clouds a beautiful airplane in pink and granite is coming over with its colours, it cheerfully tinges all around, as it passes by and its lights blink vividly.
With a bit of imagination, I see it taking off, quietly and beautifully and if you want I can make it land.

On any sheet of paper, I draw a sail, leaving the quay,
With me and some of my friends in it drinking and having a good time, all in peace with life.
From America to America*, I can easily travel in a blink.
I just turn a compass around and with a circle I draw the world.

A boy is walking on and on as he reaches a wall;
Over this wall, not too far from it, the future is waiting for us.
And the future is a spaceship which we try to drive.
But the future is always hurried and merciless.
There's no right time for it to come,
And without asking or warning us, it just changes our lives
And then it beckons us to cry or laugh together.

Along this road, it's not our duty to know or see what's coming to us.
No one surely knows where it's heading us to; we're just going on the way crossing a beautiful footbridge
Painted in watercolor which someday will fade after all.

On a sheet of paper, I draw a yellow-coloured sun
(which will fade someday).
And with five or six straight lines I easily draw a castle
(which will fade someday).
I just turn a compass around and with a circle I draw the world
(which will fade someday).
