Ceramics I students are currently putting the finishing touches on their tea sets. Students had to create a functional tea pot and two matching accessories (cups, honey/cream container, or sugar jar). They could create their tea sets using any of three methods of hand-building: pinch, coil, and slab.

Alexis Massey

Tea set project requirements:

1. Teapot and cups share a theme.
2. Handle, spout, and lid were added to teapot.
3. The body of the teapot is approximately 6" x 6".
4. Teapot is functional.
5. Two cups or accessories were created.

My students completed several exciting units this nine weeks. They began by creating a variety of book cover illustrations. (See "Hippie" example.) Next, after studying the proportions of the human face, each student drew a male and female face. The three examples below demonstrate how each person sees and creates differently while looking at the same model. Then, we studied Seurat's pointillism and students created some beautiful original pictures using only dots. Next, we looked at works of Pablo Picasso and using oil pastels, students designed their own amazing cubism drawings. Lastly, we studied the works of M. C. Escher and students designed some fascinating original "Escheresque" tessellations.

DP Students participated in the Visual Arts Assessment Pilot for OCPS

A visual art assessment tool has been established to monitor and track student progress in the visual arts as part of the TIF grant currently being used to enhance the learning environment at several schools in our district. As part of this initiative, our school is involved in field testing the new performance-based assessment tool being developed in collaboration with the OCPS Accountability, Research, and Assessment team and the Fine Arts Curriculum team.
